

UNIVERSITY of HOUSTON

Developmental, Cognitive, and Behavioral Neuroscience An Integrative Program in Lifespan Development

The Developmental, Cognitive, and Behavioral Neuroscience (DCBN) in the Department of Psychology at the University of Houston invites applications for the Ph.D. program for the 2020-21 academic term. Deadline for applications is December 15, 2019.

The DCBN Program

- 11 faculty members, a diverse yet interactive group, interested in understanding how the brain and behavior change over time
- 4 areas (Behavioral Neuroscience, Cognitive Neuroscience, Cognitive, Developmental)
- 1 truly interdisciplinary educational experience
- Participate in research funded by various federal agencies and private foundations
- Potential to collaborate with faculty who contribute to physical and mental health research and education across several colleges, departments, and institutions
- Tuition fellowships cover tuition & fees; Research Assistantships & Teaching Fellowship opportunities
- Click for more information

The Psychology Department

- New external funding typically ranges from $8 - $9 million per year
- The Texas Institute for Measurement Evaluation, and Statistics (TIMES), a university-wide research center resource
- State-of-the-art animal facilities including an Animal Behavior Core
- Brand new genetics and molecular laboratories
- Human laboratory facilities available for eye-tracking, electrophysiology, neuroimaging, etc.

The University of Houston

- Tier 1 (Highest Research Activity; Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement Teaching)
- The 2nd most ethnically diverse public research university in the US and recognized as a Hispanic Serving Institution and an Asian American, Native American, Pacific Islander Serving Institution
- About 40% of all sponsored research funds are on health-related topics
- Part of the Texas Medical Center, the largest medical complex in the world

The City of Houston

- Fastest growing large city in the US
- Most affordable urban area in which to live
- Multitude of cultural events, arts programs, shopping, and entertainment
- Terrific restaurants of various cuisines
- Two major airports
- Sub-tropical climate with mild winters
- Parks, bike trails, proximity to beaches
- For more information, watch these videos: Living in Houston and University of Houston Faculty

